

MADLaT 2016

Join us for another exciting conference as Manitoba Association for Distributed Learning and Training Conference (MADLaT) hosts an interdisciplinary forum for educators, trainers and technology specialists involved in technology teaching, training and learning.

Open Resources, Open Learning and Open Minds What do these mean in 2016?

What do we mean by open or accessible? How far into our educational institutions and public education endeavors do these concepts reach, what do they look like and are they sufficient? Who are we open to, in what ways and at what costs?

MADLaT 2016: Keynote Speaker

Alec Couros is a professor of educational technology and media at the Faculty of Education, University of Regina, in Saskatchewan.

An award-winning educator, Alec helps his undergraduate and graduate students take up the incredible affordances of our connected world through the integration of educational technology in teaching and learning.

A portrait of Alec Couros, a man with dark hair, wearing a dark suit jacket over a light purple button-down shirt. He is smiling slightly and looking towards the camera.

Alec is also a well-recognized scholar and researcher who has given hundreds of keynotes and workshops around the globe on diverse topics such as digital citizenship, connected/networked learning, social media in education and critical media literacy, providing educators, students, and parents with the knowledge necessary to take advantage of and thrive in our new digital reality.

Finally, Alec is a passionate advocate of openness in education and demonstrates this commitment through his open access publications, considerable digital presence and contributions, and highly successful MOOCs and open boundary courses.
